HEALER – CHRIS BREEDT

You did everything with serenity gentling your way through Charming even the most anxious or downright hostile patients

Always the sterile rooms of your practice felt warm as long as you were in them filling the space with empathy

I told you things I thought I would never get to say to another living being

I guess I was right because you're gone
There is a lingering memory of the sound of your voice

Where will we go now when we need help?
How will we make sense without your wisdom?

Lightning has split an oak
The crack reverberates
I wonder how the waterwheel will ever turn again Without everything that the you are flowing like a river through our village
